JAN'S Accommodation and Compliance Series

Introduction

Transgender is a term used to describe people whose gender identity differs from the sex the doctor marked on their birth certificate. JAN can provide information on where to get legal guidance, find workplace inclusion resources, and locate more information.

Situations and Solutions:

The following situations and solutions are real-life examples of accommodations that were made by JAN customers. Because accommodations are made on a case-by-case basis, these examples may not be effective for every workplace but give you an idea about the types of accommodations that are possible.

A new hire at a software development company expressed upon hire that they are transgender and would like to be addressed using masculine pronouns, like he, him, his.

The employee asked his manager to encourage others to do this, and requested the opportunity to communicate his transition to co-workers he must interact with, to increase awareness about transgender individuals.

A retail food delivery driver in the process of transitioning recently began dressing and grooming in ways that match his gender identity.

Delivery drivers are required to wear a company-issued uniform that is available in different styles, based on gender. This employee requested to change his uniform style to fit his gender expression.

A production worker in a manufacturing facility requested to use the restroom corresponding with the gender with which they identified.

Recognizing that many people value privacy, the employer created a single-use, gender-neutral restroom available to all employees for use in addition to gender-segregated restrooms. The employee was permitted to access to either restroom.

A tax accountant was in the process of transitioning from female to male and requested a leave of absence from work to undergo a hysterectomy and chest reconstruction surgery.

The employee had several weeks of personal leave saved, but needed an additional six weeks to recover from surgery. The employee was permitted access to a personal medical leave program, offered by the employer to all qualifying employees, for the time that was needed to recuperate.

A food service attendant in a fast food restaurant officially changed her name to correspond with her gender identity.

Employees are required to wear a name tag and say their name to customers when accepting drive-through orders. The employee requested a new name tag and asked co-workers to call her by that name. A representative from human resources also met with the employee to make the identification changes necessary in her personnel files.
